The Scientific Secrets of Perfect Timing: Dan Pink (4:15)
The Science of Timing with Dan Pink (6:58)

Timing is everything - but how much do we know about timing itself? Bestselling author Dan Pink shows that timing is really a science.

… to watch more on this topic: The Secret of Perfect Timing | Dan Pink (58:22)

Areas where WAPs are projected to be replaced during the week of July 16th:
- 551 Psychology
- 563 Ellison Hall
- 408 Ergonomics Lab
- 514 Ocean Science Education Building
- 504 Bio III
- 235 Life Sciences Building
- 573 Buchanan Hall
- 451 Military Science
- 489 Sycamore Hall
- 570 Surge II
- 936 Trailer

Areas where WAPs are projected to be replaced during the week of July 23rd:
- 560 - Phelps
- 535 - North Hall
- 591 - Kerr Hall
- 564 - Girvetz
- 528 - South Hall
- 552 - Cheadle
- 558 - SAASB
- 532 - Coral Tree

As WAP upgrades are performed, the teams performing the work may find certain areas are inaccessible due to meetings, classes, etc. In those situations, the work for that area will be rescheduled and will occur at a different time, typically within the same week.

During an individual WAP replacement, we expect most clients will roam to an adjacent WAP, however there may be disruption (e.g. video playback) during the roaming process.

The project schedule is available at this website:
https://cio.ucsb.edu/program.management/wireless.access.point.replacement

Diversity Forum Newsletter Spring 2018 final.pdf

The Wireless Access Point (WAP) replacement project is making good progress, 261 Wireless APs or 26.6 percent of the total number of devices to be replaced, have been replaced so far. A progress chart is available here: Progress Chart

Eligibility Requirements

Eligible applicants are:
- students enrolled in a graduate program;
- fellows participating in one of ARL’s diversity recruitment programs; or
- library professionals within the first three years of their professional careers.

Selection Criteria

The selection criteria for the scholarship are:
- diverse representation—eligible classifications include those outlined
Timing is everything—how much do we know about timing itself? Our lives are a never-ending stream of “when” decisions: when to start a business, schedule a class, get serious about a person. Yet we make those decisions based on intuition and guesswork. Bestselling author and voice of the RSA’s own sensational 16 million-viewed RSA Animate ‘Drive’, Dan Pink shows that timing is really a science. Drawing on a rich trove of research from psychology, biology, and economics, Pink reveals how best to live, work, and succeed.

The happy secret to better work (12:13)

We believe we should work hard in order to be happy, but could we be thinking about things backwards? In this fast-moving and very funny talk, psychologist Shawn Achor argues that, actually, happiness inspires us to be more productive.

Wake Up! Are you sleepwalking your way through the day?

Did you know that getting a good night’s sleep is just as important as eating healthy and exercising? Sleep can help protect your mental health, physical health, quality of life, and safety. The damage from a lack of adequate sleep can occur in an instant (car accident) or over a period of time. Ongoing sleep problems can increase your risk for chronic health problems. It can also affect how well you think, react, work, learn, and get along with others. Join us as we discuss how sleep and lack of sleep affects us and brainstorm the changes you need to make to experience a good night’s sleep!

Benefits and Responsibilities

The $1,000 scholarship is to cover registration fees for any of the pre- and/or post-conference workshops, air and ground transportation, hotel accommodations, and meals. Awardees will be responsible for:

• making arrangements for travel and hotel accommodations;
• paying for any meals above and beyond what is covered by the scholarship; and
• registering for the conference and selecting the conference option—the conference will cover the registration fee.

The awardees will also be asked to collaborate and write an issue brief highlighting key themes from their conference experience and their overall experience. ARL will publish the issue brief on its website. Awardees are also encouraged to use Twitter, Facebook, and other social media during the event and contribute to a shared Google doc for collective note-taking.

Applications

Apply online by 11:59 p.m. pacific daylight time on Friday, August 3, 2018. The selection committee—composed of members of the ARL Assessment Committee, conference steering committee, and past travel award winners—will notify applicants of selection decisions the week of August 20. Each applicant must provide:

• a statement of interest (400 words maximum) that describes how attending the Library Assessment Conference supports their learning and development goals;
• a résumé or CV; and
• a recommendation letter from a faculty member or supervisor.

Springer Nature is proud to honor the legacy of Cynthia Graham Hurd by sponsoring a $1,500 annual scholarship for library employees to attend the Charleston Library Conference.

Our technological experiences are increasingly mediated by algorithms - the code and computational processes embedded into our software. Recent work by scholars, such as Dr. Safiya Umoja Noble, has shown how algorithms exhibit implicit biases and reify societal prejudices. Moreover, the technical nature of algorithms and the lack of transparency surrounding them can be a challenge for novices. We, and our patrons, routinely engage in systems that predict, recommend, and speculate about our interests based on the digital fingerprint we provide with our link clicks and “likes”, but we all struggle understanding how and why those systems work as they do. In seeking to understand common systems, like the Facebook news feed or the Google search engine results page, we want to help students discover the scope and reach of algorithms. We are looking for ways to address a gap in our field: a lack of an understanding around the rules that govern our software and shape our digital experiences.

In this interactive webcast, the presenters will introduce some of the possibilities around a new competency that they have termed “Algorithmic Awareness.” They will use modules via short polls and breakout rooms that ask how the group experiences algorithms in their digital lives. They will also share as OER research charettes how preliminary research into algorithms can be used to teach these technical concepts. At its core, this session is about introducing a new expertise for library professionals and providing a new teaching moment for our librarians.

Learning Outcomes

- Identify and define algorithms in action within common online interactions such as the sorting of a news feed, an eCommerce experience, and a search experience.
- Learn how Algorithmic Awareness as a concept fits into the ACRL Framework.
- Apply session modules (released as OER) as actionable steps for teaching about algorithms in their own information literacy instruction.

Who Should Attend

Professionals such as librarians or professors who can subsequently act as a resource to teach students about the implications of algorithms in hopes of a more transparent relationship with our technological experiences.

Cynthia Graham Hurd was a librarian for over 31 years in Charleston public and academic libraries. She worked as the branch manager of the popular St. Andrews Regional Library, and as a part-time reference librarian at the College of Charleston. On June 17, 2015, her life ended when a lone gunman entered the historic Emanuel AME Church and killed nine people during a prayer meeting. Cynthia is remembered as a “tireless servant of the community who spent her life helping residents, making sure they had every opportunity for an education and personal growth.”

To apply for the 2018 scholarship, library employees are asked to submit a presentation document or PowerPoint detailing a project or initiative that made a positive impact on students and/or local communities. This includes empowering students, improving educational outcomes, supporting diverse research and learning needs, fostering volunteerism and community outreach, developing educational and advocacy programs, and more.

Submission deadline is September 10, 2018.

The Association of Research Libraries (ARL) has released Library Development SPEC Kit 359, which gathers information to better understand the supporting structures and resources (personnel, financial, and material) and the activities and expectations associated with library development efforts at ARL member libraries.

This SPEC survey retained some elements of the similar 2006 study for longitudinal comparison of the pre-recession environment and the current, post-recession environment. The 2018 survey included new elements to more broadly depict the current role of library development, including “friend-raising” (efforts intended to generate committed and supportive relationships with outside parties and entities), communication to stakeholders of library value added, and stories and/or descriptive measures provided in these communication efforts. The survey also examined the role of advisory boards in the fund-raising process. Since many academic libraries are either currently or soon will be engaged in a capital campaign, or renovation of an old library, or construction of a new library, the survey also examined the complexities of these common endeavors.

This SPEC Kit includes examples of organizational charts, position descriptions, documents on fund-raising goal setting and development board and friends governance, gift policies, capital campaign literature, and statements on intellectual freedom, inclusion, and diversity.

SPEC Kits on the ARL Digital Publications platform are open access and freely available to all readers.

Read/download SPEC Kit 359.

WORK/LIFE

3 Unconscious Ways You’re Sabotaging Your Time Off from Work
Thanks to technology, it often feels as though it is impossible to disengage from our typical work tasks. Even when we’re supposed to be on vacation, we continue to do things such as respond to email and check phone messages. The author of this article suggests that sometimes we do things that causes us to sabotage our time off. He offers suggestions to make it easier for us to disconnect from work and avoid ruining our time away. If you give yourself the time you need to recharge, you can return to work re-energized and prepared to contribute in creative and productive ways.

“Gerry Bayne: Artificial intelligence is being used in and developed for the library, museum, and archives fields. As the technology becomes more advanced and widespread, it’s important to see the uses AI can bring to the library. I spoke with two librarians about this trend: Karim Boughida, who’s the Dean of University Libraries at the University of Rhode Island, and Chris Erdmann, Chief Strategist for Research Collaboration at North Carolina State University. I started by asking them in what ways are they seeing libraries engage with AI, and what they think are the most promising areas for library focus. ....”
